Dear Mike,

It has been three months since you presented your "Can I Kiss You?" Program to high school students, and separately to parents, in our communities of Lake Forest and Lake Bluff, Illinois. To my surprise, and immense satisfaction, people are still talking about it! The combination of the message, respect your partner and ask before you assume, and the messenger, you: an intelligent, energetic, articulate man, resonated with our audience. One parent called the concept and delivery "extraordinary and effective"; and three students at a local coffee shop were overheard recently, two full months after your visit, discussing the idea of "asking" that had been presented by "that dude we heard at school in the fall." You made a compelling case for the idea of "asking" without lecturing, thereby keeping students open to internalizing the message rather than shutting them down.

We appreciated your professionalism as a speaker, and your commitment to the message was as clear in your first presentation of the day as it was at your last presentation in the evening. We look forward to having you back in the near future.

Sincerely,
