Dear Mike,

Thank you for returning to the Christopher Newport University campus to speak to our first year students. As is always the case, your presentation provided important information and initiated conversation and reflection among our students.

Once the academic year began, I polled first year students (very unscientifically!) in order to gain feedback about the Welcome Week programming and events. Student responses to your presentation are enclosed for your review.

Plans for CNU's Welcome Week 2007 are now underway and you should anticipate being contacted by someone from my office in the near future. I hope you will consider returning to CNU in the fall of 2007.

Thank you again and make it a great day.

Sincerely,

Donna Eddleman
Dean of Students

Welcome Week Feedback:

Can I Kiss You? – Mike Domitrz

This was my favorite program of the week. I found it very entertaining and informative.

I'd like him to talk to the guys I've dated. But seriously he had a great message and didn't go overboard or come on as a parent

Opened our eyes and was fun

His speech sobered up a half-hearted crowd. His logic was unbeatable- if you're so suave, why would asking hurt? As a female, it was nice to realize that I could also take the lead in a relationship, especially if I wanted to keep my other choices mine as well. He ended it with a powerful message of triumph over impossible odds, and taught us how to care as opposed to sympathize. I would love to see him again if he ever came back on campus as well.

In my opinion he was by far the best of the speakers. He gave just enough hilarity to make the audience listen, but also had a very serious message that had to be heard but is difficult to talk about.

This was also a very fun program to attend! I love his story and his way of speaking!

Mr. Domitrz had a good message and was able to get through to the students

This was a great program that I think got to a lot of people! It is very important because there are people out there who have been hurt by people who assume too much. This program will change lives, and it is very important...

This was an emotional, hilarious, passionate way of presenting a subject that is often mishandled. It also opened a lot of eyes.

It was entertaining as well as informative

Everyone should be aware of what was taught in this program. I saw a lot of people crying. Emotion is not bad. It made people think and feel and realize what is going on. It was a very emotional assembly for me.

This topic must be addressed to college students and what better way?

This presentation was funny and at the same time, hit a chord of truth inside me. Mr. Domitrz did an excellent job of making "asking" make sense.

I loved this, he was really down to earth and he was really great at conveying the message of asking before you do something that could potentially lead to trouble in the long run. It was great.

He made an uncomfortable maybe awkward subject relaxed and he made lots of good points.

Practical and useful; brought seriousness and innovation to a bleak and stigmatized topics. The sudden topic of rape is a little jarring in the presentation but nonetheless, important.

I enjoyed Mr. Domitrz's talk. He brought up new and interesting points which made logical sense. He should be invited back.

Mike did a great job of getting his point across and I believe he left a memorable and lasting impression.

It is important that each student have an idea of what to do if they find themselves in an uncomfortable situation.

While his presentation was hilarious at times, it was also very touching and completely relevant.

He gave me a whole new and more mature outlook on dating and intimacy. The only reason I could see him not coming to CNU is if he were to see five different schools instead because what he has to say is important.

I thought this was pretty good but when he told about his sister being raped it kind of killed the mood but it is still necessary to keep it because the students need to know about the dangers of rape and need to be as safe as possible

Mr. Domitrz should definitely be kept. His speech put a different twist on things having to do with dating. He made our emotions jump from excitedly entertained to shamed and caring.

Mr. Domitrz lesson was inspiring, because I also have a sister

It was true and informative. It put things into perspective and is probably going to prevent a lot of problems

He was informative and enjoyable to listen to

Great job and makes a great point on a tough but common incident. Great! Really funny! Really made me listen!

He had a great message with entertainment involved.

He was also interesting, though not as energetic, he was down to earth. What got me the most was how sensible his proposal was. It was certainly not what I was expecting. He was interactive and funny, which always helps.

I thought this was a great program and I would see it again and again. I wish it had been better advertised in the "Passport" because despite the fact that it was required, people chose not to go and I think everyone should've seen it.
